

Daniel Afenya

I am Daniel Afenya, a product of University of Ghana, Legon, where I received a Bachelor's degree in Economics and Statistics.

Whiles at the University of Ghana, I was an active member of University of Ghana Economics Students Society (UGESS). I later became the Assistant Finance head of UGESS.

I undertook internship programmes during summer vacations whiles in school which was a compulsory aspect of my Scholarship with Educational Pathways International (EPI). These internship programmes have given me the needed experience and exposure that I need to be successful in the corporate world.

I recently served as a volunteer teacher at Akim Asafo Senior High School by teaching Economics and Mathematics. This was a fun experience because it gave me the opportunity to share my experience with the high school students and also mentor them. It was an interesting experience for me because I got to know some of our brothers and sister at KNUST who joined the two weeks community work.

My future ambition is to work as a Banker and to establish my own organization and provide world class consultancy services to potential clients. It is also my aspiration to set up an organization that will groom children to stay focused on their education and also help brilliant and needy children. In furtherance of my dream, I hope to pursue graduate program in economics/ finance or Insurance.
