I am Doris Kyekutaa Worry, a recent graduate of the Kwame Nkrumah University of Science and Technology. I have always wanted to become a Lawyer in future and I believe having studied Land Economy offers me the foundation to realize this dream.

One of the best things that happened to me while I was in school was getting enrolled on the Educational Pathways International (EPI) scholarship program. Apart from the peace of mind I had for my studies due to the financial assistance I received from EPI, I also got to be part of a bigger family of students from different programs of study, allowing me to learn from them and also challenge myself to do better. Our monthly meetings were fun, educative and they contributed significantly to my education as well as to improving my personal life. Our recent community service at Akyim Asafo Senior High school helped me realize that I have what it takes to give back to society in my own small way.

I see young people in my community who are not in school. I believe most of them would be in school if they had the financial support. Just like EPI made my dream of finishing the university a reality, in the future, I hope to be able to assist the youth in my community in pursuing their education. I believe education is the key to success and instead of just a few privileged ones, everyone should be given the opportunity of being educated.

I will always be grateful to Educational Pathways International for it would have been impossible for me to successfully complete my university education without the financial support and mentorship I received.
