

Esmond Awortwe

My name is Esmond Awortwe. I attended Kwame Nkrumah University of Science and Technology (KNUST), Kumasi - Ghana. I offered BSc. Telecommunication Engineering.

I love mathematics and that motivated me to read Engineering. As a female reading Engineering, it was not an easy task at all but I sailed through. One of my motives in life is that I believe whatever one sets his/her mind to do one can. I aspire now to read my masters and to practice as one of the best females in the engineering firm, most specifically in the telecom sector. It has always been my dream to educate girls coming up to take their mathematics seriously and rid off the negative notion that some professions are for men. I would like to start from the basic school I attended in my community With these encouraging words and education the students will be inspired and improve on their performance.

Educational Pathways International (EPI) has been of great help to me during my tertiary education. I joined EPI in 2014 and it has greatly changed my life. Finance was a challenge for my family but after becoming a beneficiary of EPI, I could study with a peace of mind. Not only that but EPI has made me part of a wonderful family where we meet to learn, interact and have fun amongst ourselves.
