

Priscilla Lamiokor Addison

My name is Priscilla Lamiokor Addison. I am 25 years old and counting. I attended University of Ghana where I did a six year course in Medicine. It's not been an easy journey, these past six years medical school is tough. There have been a number of things though that have made my journey easier than it would have otherwise been, one of which is my alliance with Educational Pathways International- EPI.

Being part of EPI was one of the best things that happened to me after being admitted into the university. It removed every possibility of me having to worry about finances in relation to school. Through EPI I also became acquainted with people who made an important impact in my life. EPI has imparted to me a virtue I learned nowhere else, a sense of responsibility towards my community and country as a whole.

I would like to continue in my line of profession and specialize in one of the specialties in medicine. I am not quite certain at the moment which one it would be. Having made it to the top, in the future I would like to take the initiative that EPI took and provide financial support to bright but financially struggling students, and also become a mentor to the younger generation.
