

Christopher Boadi Sarpong

I am Christopher Boadi Sarpong, an alumnus of Kwame Nkrumah University of Science and Technology, School of Science, Ghana (class of 2018) where I studied Bachelor of Medicine and Surgery. The zeal to study Medicine and Surgery was borne out of admiration for Dr. Benjamin Carson (a US based Neurosurgeon and the 17th United States Secretary of Housing and Urban Development).

I was privileged to be a beneficiary of the Educational Pathways International (EPI) Scholarship program which met my needs financially and beyond. I had the opportunity to equip myself with some necessary principles in life during our meetings. The paramount amongst them is Time Management.

It has been my earnest desire to contribute my quota towards the development of Ghana and as a Medical Doctor, the profession provides me with one of the best prospects to realise this dream. It is obvious that complaints about problems in this country are becoming unbearable, yet solutions to these problems have not been that efficient. But I am of a different standing.

I choose to employ my intellect and resources to cause a positive change in Ghana. In my quest to make a difference, I will support health education, explore avenues that seek to help the sick but poor to gain access to medical care and helping needy and brilliant students with aids within my capacity.

In the course of my carrier, I will like to do more of voluntary work as that gives me a sense of satisfaction. I feel obliged to help society and as such I will not hesitate to do just that. Someday, I intend to do further studies in Internal Medicine.

I cannot close this piece without expressing my profound gratitude to EPI for such an amazing opportunity. Indeed I am grateful.

Long live EPI; Long live our dreams!
