

ELIZABETH POMAA NTI

My name is Elizabeth Poomaa Nti a Bachelor of Science in Nursing and a graduate from the University of Ghana, Legon. I was actually motivated to do Nursing because of the passion and love I have in caring for the sick and Educational Pathways International (EPI) made this dream a reality.

I became part of the Educational Pathways International Scholarship Scheme in the 2015/2016 academic year. EPI's scholarship has been more than a blessing not only to me but to my family as well throughout my tertiary education in the University of Ghana, Legon.

EPI gave me a comprehensive scholarship for my university education. Aside the financial support, EPI has also shaped me in all aspects of life through the organization of EPI Family meetings, leadership and training sessions. Preparing for a job interview, time management, writing of a curriculum vitae, public speaking, goal setting were some of the topics discussed so as to prepare us for the outside world.

Nursing is concerned with providing holistic care for patients and hence provides me with the opportunity to willingly give out my best to patients in my care so as to save lives and bring happiness to individuals and families as a whole.

As a graduate Nurse I look further to pursuing my M.Phil. and PHd in Nursing which will provide me with the opportunity to contribute in academia through Research and further impacting the clinical field with the knowledge gained and also to enhance my skills in the field.

Also, giving back to society is one of my desires and happiness. I do this by partaking in health screening programs, health education in churches, schools and communities at large and also partaking in communal labour.

I am forever grateful to Educational Pathways International for their support to me and to all Educational Pathways International beneficiaries. All efforts and support is much appreciated and I know this will go a long way to uplift the name of EPI higher.
