

ROSELYN DAVOUR

My name is Roselyn Delase Davour. I schooled at the University of Ghana (Legon). I studied Bachelor of Science in Dietetics. I had just lost my dad when I enrolled at University of Ghana in September 2016. I applied for Educational Pathways International (EPI) scholarship after the interviews, I was selected to be a beneficiary and since then, my life has been transformed.

EPI has been a blessing to me. Thanks to EPI, I was able to study effectively without worrying about how to get money to pay my tuition fee, residential fees, study materials which enabled me to be able to afford books, other stationery and electronic gadgets which made my academic life easier and better. EPI also gave me stipends which was my upkeep money on campus without lacing so much burden on my mother. This did put my mind at rest and inspired me to study harder and made the most out of it so that I can make my family and EPI proud. EPI affected my academic life positively but also, it has made me a better person. We were taught important life skills that helped me in school and will also do so in the corporate world. This has really enabled me to build my presentation skills and significantly improve my confidence during public speaking.

I chose Dietetics because I believe that the world is gradually prioritizing preventive healthcare over curative healthcare. This means several people are becoming extremely interested in what to do to live healthy and prevent diseases. Dietetics is one of the most significant maxims of preventive healthcare. I decided to study this programme so that I can guide people to understand the concept of healthy eating practice and also play a key role in treating and managing people with diseases using medical nutrition therapy.

I would like to practice as a Dietitian and further my education to get a Master's degree in Public Health. I would also venture into my private business as well.

When I look at how EPI has made my dreams possible and taken me a step closer to my aspirations, it inspires me to also work harder so that I can give back to society by helping the less privileged to also get the chance at school and become who they want to be. I plan on starting a foundation in the future which will focus on supporting and mentoring brilliant and needy students and also empower the Ghanaian youth to harness and explore their creativity and talents.

I thank EPI so much for giving me this life-transforming opportunity and helping me to become a better person. I am really grateful.
