

EWURABENA YEBOWAA AFFUL

My name is Ewurabena Yebowaa Afful, I studied Pharmacy at the University of Ghana (Legon). Educational Pathways International (EPI) has impacted my life positively in many ways since I became part of this great family in the year 2016.

Financially, EPI granted me a full scholarship for my university education. This motivated me to study hard because whenever school resumed, I had peace of mind to study. Spiritually, our Programme Director supported us with prayers and encouraged us to live a moral life, aside the skills that she took us through. We were also advised on how to go about our studies effectively in order to be able to achieve our set goals. I can now set my priorities right and also manage my time very well. I have also been able to overcome the fear of standing in front of people to speak after being taken through public speaking.

Growing up, I wanted to care for the sick. The passion I had to do this was so strong it influenced my decision to become a Pharmacist so I can one day manufacture drugs that can be used to cure diseases. My career goal is to specialize in the area of research specifically drug design and development to be able to design and manufacture drugs that can be used to treat novel diseases and other life-threatening diseases as well.

In the future, I plan on collaborating with other colleagues to establish a Pharmaceutical company in Ghana that will be involved in extensive research and the manufacturing of cost-effective drugs (very affordable drugs which are effective) in order to help improve the health condition of Ghanaians and the world at large.

EPI has been a blessing to me. I thank EPI for giving me the opportunity to be a part of this wonderful family and also make my dream of becoming a Pharmacist in the future a reality.
