

SAMUEL TABIRI

I am Samuel Tabiri, a first-class BSc. Statistics graduate from Kwame Nkrumah University of Science and Technology, Ghana (KNUST).

I am a beneficiary of Educational Pathways International (EPI) and this organization (family) has made a great impact in my life in many ways. Through this institution, I have learnt a lot and the application of what I have learnt in this Organization has resulted in the improvement in my life. For instance, through EPI, I have learnt how to manage my time effectively, plan very well, relate socially and understand the cultures of people from different background.

Also, through EPI, I have been able to perform extremely excellent in my academics due to the guidance, support and motivation I received from EPI.

I realized most of the institutions in my country lack accurate information which serves as a hindrance to their contribution to the progress of my country (Ghana). As a result, the development rate of my country is unsatisfactory. Offering BSc. Statistics would offer me the chance of becoming a Data Analyst to enable me analyse data effectively, provide reliable information and facts to these institutions to ensure their progress, thereby contributing to the development of the country.

Furthermore, with the knowledge acquired, I will be able to educate members in my community by impacting the knowledge gained to the members and also set up an institution that will help people facing any challenge about any information or data set they have to enable them to realize how they can extract meaningful and useful ideas from the data set or information they have.

In addition, with the research procedures and skills acquired from my career, it will enable me to conduct a tangible research that will enable me provide hypothesis and solutions that can help curb phenomenal challenges confronting the society. It is therefore my future desire to pursue masters in statistics so as to gain more insight in the subject.

Thanks to Educational Pathways International (EPI) for their assistance both financially and academically in making me achieve these goals.
