

EBENEZER YEBOAH

My name is Ebenezer Yeboah, born and raised by my late mother and father, Nancy Nyarko (Late) and Francis Yeboah respectively. I highly recognised my educational journey in my early high school days in Accra Academy, a noble high school institution in Ghana, where I chose to read General Business Course in September 2016. Two years later after my completion at Accra Academy in 2019, I got admission into the University of Ghana to further my education where I read a four-year BSc. Administration programme for undergraduates with a major in Accounting in my third year.

Majoring in Accounting was inspired by my late mother. As a trader, she usually kept records of her clients who bought her fabrics both in cash and on credit basis. That inspiration made me take the bold step of pursuing Accounting to channel the same energy into the corporate world.

The Educational Pathways International Scholarship Programme has shaped and impacted me and many others in my country, Ghana. The beginning of 2021/2022 academic year at the University of Ghana, I was privileged to be awarded the Educational Pathways International (EPI) Scholarship.

The EPI programme encouraged me to take up internship opportunities to be abreast with the required skills on the job market. As an aspiring Chartered Accountant, honesty, hard work, integrity, great oratory skills and confidence are values that EPI instil in all its beneficiaries.

My community and many other communities degrade the value of education and the need to pursue a high level of education. As an advocate for high level of education, it would be my goal to encourage members of our community to value the acquisition of knowledge and the pursuit for higher level of education without any gender discrimination. 'Education is the most powerful weapon that can change the world' as quoted by the late Nelson Mandela.

On the national level, my aim is to create value to corporations that will generally help the progress of the country through tax fulfilment and undertaking philanthropic activities.

Words will not be enough to express my appreciation to EPI for believing in my dreams and dreams of all other beneficiaries under the programme.
