

DAVID FRIMPONG

Since becoming a beneficiary of the Educational Pathways International (EPI) scholarship programme, my perspective on leadership and service has changed completely. EPI gave me more than financial support. It gave me mentorship, discipline, and the confidence to pursue excellence in academics. The values EPI instills have shaped how I approach my studies, my relationships, and my long-term goals. I have learned that success means nothing if it's not used to lift others.

My name is David Frimpong, a Bachelor of Law (LLB) graduate from the Kwame Nkrumah University of Science and Technology (KNUST).

I studied Law. I chose Law because I believe justice is the foundation of a fair society. In Ghana, too many vulnerable people lack access to legal support and information. I wanted a programme that would equip me to stand up for those who cannot speak for themselves and help strengthen the rule of law in our communities.

My immediate career goal is to practice law with a focus on human rights, legal aid, and access to justice for underserved persons in Ghana. In the future, I hope to establish a legal aid initiative that provides free legal education and representation to women, children, and low-income families. I also plan to advocate for policy reforms that make Ghana's justice system more accessible.

I intend to give back by organizing community legal literacy clinics, volunteering with NGOs that support vulnerable populations, and mentoring younger students who aspire to serve. My long-term vision is to contribute to a Ghana where no one is denied justice because they cannot afford

I am deeply grateful to EPI for believing in me and investing in my future. The opportunity and guidance I've received have been transformational. Thank you for molding me into someone committed to service, integrity, and impact.
